and Education Fund

THOMAS JEFFERSON UNIVERSITY

Pancreatic and Related Cancers Surgical Research and Education Fund

The University established the Pancreatic and Related Cancers Surgical Research and Education Fund to further the discoveries of Jefferson researchers and clinicians in the diagnosis and treatment of pancreatic cancer. Contributions to the Fund support a variety of objectives at Jefferson. Primary among them are:

- Increased laboratory research
- An endowed fellowship in hepatobiliary and pancreatic surgery
- An endowed chair in pancreatic cancer research
- A dedicated center for ongoing research and patient care

Each year, more than 32,000

people are affected by pancreatic cancer nationwide. At Thomas Jefferson University, Samuel D. Gross Professor and Chair of Surgery, Dr. Charles J. Yeo and his team are finding new ways to diagnose and treat this life threatening disease. Their research will benefit future generations of patients and their families worldwide.

Dr. Yeo, an internationally renowned leader in his field, joined Jefferson in 2005 to head a multidisciplinary team of clinicians and scientists in furthering knowledge of pancreatic cancer and related illnesses. His work explores avenues of early detection – including investigations into genetic, environmental and lifestyle-related links to the disease – and more effective screening procedures with the aim of maximizing treatment outcomes.

The Jefferson team's research aims to uncover treatments that will be genetically targeted to each individual and will integrate surgery with oncology, pathology, gastroenterology, pain management, palliative care, genetics and nursing.

We ask you to partner with us as we confront the challenges of pancreatic and related cancers. Your gift will provide support for Jefferson researchers and clinicians as they advance knowledge by developing innovative techniques for detection, prevention, and treatment of these cancers. Please join us on this path to discovery.
